Driver of Wrecked Car Was Joy Riding Says Jury

Verdict of No Cause of Action in $10,000 Suit by Young Woman Who Was Hurt When Car Struck Pole — Chauffeur Admitted He Had Party Joy Riding.

In the Supreme court Wednesday afternoon an action brought by Miss Jennie Elting of Jansen avenue, this city, by guardian, against Ethel K. Wells was taken up for trial before Judge Coffey and a jury. The action is brought by Miss Elting to recover $10,000 for personal injuries sustained on the evening of November 2, 1924, when an automobile in which she was riding met with an accident on Flatbush avenue near the City Home. The car, which was owned by Mrs. Wells and was registered as an omnibus, was driven on that evening by one Percy Parker who had taken a party to Roosa Inn on the Flatbush road and was returning at the time of the accident.

Plaintiff claims that Parker was acting as the agent or servant of Mrs. Wells and she is therefore liable for his actions. This contention is denied by the defendant who claims that she had an understanding with Parker, that he was to operate her car as an omnibus and meet certain persons and transport passengers and that he was to make return to her for the use of the car. The defendant denies that Parker was her agent or servant on the occasion of the accident and that at that time he was operating the car on what defendant's attorney termed a "joy ride."

Miss Elting, who is 18 years old, suffered concussion of the brain, her leg and back were injured and she was confined to the Kingston City Hospital for five or six days following the accident resulting in loss of time at her employment in one of the local cigar factories.

According to the testimony which was introduced by the plaintiff and her witnesses, she and her sister had made arrangements that Sunday afternoon to meet Parker at the station and have him convey them to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jansen on East Union street. The two girls in company with Harley Pickens and Parker went to the Jansen home where they danced and entertained until the early evening when Mr. Jansen said he intended to go with his wife to Roosa Inn to see a friend. He testified that Parker told him not to hire another car but that he would take him in the Wells' tubed car. They left for Roosa Inn where they remained until after 11 o'clock. On the trip back to Kingston the Misses Elting, Harley Pickens, Mr. and Mrs. Jansen and Percy Parker, there were two other young men, Mr. Nelson and Mr. Weaver. These two young men had been at Roosa Inn and came home at the Wells' car.

According to the testimony, Parker started out from the Inn at a good clip and Mr. Jansen, who was in the rear seat with his wife, Jenkins, Jennie Elting and Weaver, told him to go slow as he had a 10 year old baby at home who he wanted to care for. Parker did slow down and drove at a moderate pace a short distance from the City Home. In the front seat were Parker, Miss Elting and Nelson. When they came to the City Home, Weaver told Parker to "step on the gas" and Parker did. Jansen said he drove rapidly for a short distance and felt the car swerve to the left of the road and next it crashed into a telephone pole. The pole, about 12 or 15 inches in size, was broken by the impact and the car was wrecked. The occupants were thrown in all directions. Miss Jennie Elting being thrown to the pavement clear of the car.

Pickens testified that when Parker started to drive fast no one said anything, but "hang on." The car came an instant later.

Jennie Elting was in the rear of the car seated on Pickens' lap. Her sister Viola was in the front with Parker. She said that she had later testified that Parker at the hospital where she was confined for a long time but that she had never told him to say at the time she had intended to pay him for the trip or heard anyone else say that Parker in her presence. She said there had been in the car before when Mrs. Wells was driving with Parker. Three had sat in the front seat at that occasion. She knew Mrs. Wells and had been to the house on Saugerties road a couple of times. Viola G. Elting is also bringing an action against Mrs. Wells for injuries sustained when the car was wrecked.

Judge William D. Brincker, Jr. and Judge Ellsworth appeared for plaintiff and Amos Van Etten for defendant.

Jury Verdict.

The jury, after deliberating for some time, returned a verdict that the driver of the car was joy riding and that there was no cause of action against Mrs. Wells.

No Cause of Action.

This afternoon the jury returned a verdict of no cause of action.

Returns Without Philanthropist

Miss Jones of Woodstock Denies She Ran Away With Gendre, Who Simply Gave Her Money to Use in Enjoying Himself in New York.

Wednesday evening Miss Helen C. Jones of Woodstock, daughter of Stewart Jones of that village, who has been sought by the authorities since last Thursday when she disappeared from home, returned to Kingston and notified her parents that she was here. Her father immediately came to Kingston. He had notified the authorities a week ago that she had disappeared with a neighbor, Louis L. Gendre, aged 42. When last seen they left the Kinkadee home on Hurley avenue where Miss Jones had been visiting.

She was questioned by District Attorney Traver in regard to her actions since her disappearance a week ago when her father secured a warrant for the arrest of Gendre charging him with abduction and kidnapping. Miss Jones is not 18 years old.

From the story told by the girl, she has been in New York city since she disappeared. She claims that on the Wednesday morning when she left Kingston, Gendre came to the house where she was staying and informed her that he was leaving for Canada. He had his Jewett touring car. He told her he had come to say good-bye and gave her $50 and told her to go to New York and enjoy herself. He took her to the station and she left alone on the 9:05 train for New York where she had since been. She claimed she had not seen Gendre since she left him at the station last week.

Gendre, who is married, left home on Monday and where he was until Wednesday morning when he arrived in Kingston at the place where the girl was staying is not known. She claimed she did not see him.

Miss Jones told of being in New York city for a week where she remained alone. She has not seen Gendre and does not know where he is. Miss Jones left for home with her parents after being questioned by the authorities.

Amendment and Labor Bill to Die

Overwhelming Sentiment Among Republican Assemblymen Against Child Labor Amendment—Only 25 Votes for 48 Hour Week Bill.

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Albany, N. Y., March 12.—The child labor amendment and bills proposing a 48 hour week for women and children in industry will be left to die in committee in the Assembly. Republican leaders of the lower house announced today.

The Republican members of the house, in conference rejected the bill sponsored by Assemblyman Moore, Republican of Westchester, proposing immediate ratification of the child labor amendment, and Senator Fearon's bill proposing the amendment be submitted to the voters at the next election. The Fearon bill already has been passed by the Senate.

The sentiment against the child labor bill was overwhelming in the conference of the Republican Assemblymen. Speaker McGinnies, Republican leader of the house, said today.

Both the child labor amendment and the 48 hour week were endorsed in the Republican platform last fall.

Only 25 votes were recorded for Assemblyman Shonk's 48 hour week bill in the conference. McGinnies said.

The Republican Assemblyman rejected Governor Smith's executive budget plan but decided to pass the Hutchinson bill, providing for an executive budget along the lines of the Dawes plan at Washington.

Governor Smith's short ballot adopted last year will be passed again at the present session.

Empire Towing Concern on River

New Company to Operate Fleet of Tugs Heretofore Used in Southern Waters, With Headquarters at Newburgh.

The Newburgh News of Wednesday says: Competition for the Cornell Towing Company of Kingston will be provided by the Empire Towing Company, a newly organized firm with headquarters in Newburgh, which has already commenced operation. The new company will soon operate eight or nine tugs which have been previously in use between Pensacola, Florida, and Cuban ports. Already operating are the "Sea King" and the "Richmond," two powerful boats, which are now ready to tow brick and stone barges, which are making their first trips today.

In Newburgh the Empire Company will have its headquarters at the docks of the Hudson Shipbuilding & Repair Company, which has 1,000 feet of river frontage, much of which can be devoted to the arrangement of tugs and the tying up of barges. At the Empire Company's office at the Hudson yards, Captain Atkins will be in charge. He has been heading the new company's fleet which has previously been operating in southern waters.

The new concern has already listed several clients. These include the Jova Brick Company, and the Roseton Brick Corporation of Roseton, brick yards at Haverstraw, the New York Trap Rock Company, which has quarries and plants at Marlborough, Peekskill and Wappingers Falls, and the Rosoff Rock Company of Marlborough.

Although most of the companies using the new service are located in the Central Hudson district, the Empire Company will operate as far north as Albany, and as far south as New York. The extent of the possible expansion of its facilities and activities is not definite.

Local Towing Season Opens

This morning there was open water above Kingston Point as far as one could see, but little floating ice below.

The ferry transport is making uninterrupted trips and the floating ice had not interfered with her schedule.

The Central Hudson Line, which resumed navigation Monday night, is now making regular trips between Kingston and New York. The steamer Poughkeepsie is on the route.

The ice in the river moved out this year without causing any trouble to navigation.

Appropriations "Cut to the Bone"

Governor Smith Prepares to Slash Appropriation Bills in Order to Prove State Income Tax Could Be Reduced.

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Albany, N. Y., March 12.—Governor Al Smith today challenged the Republican leaders of the Legislature to issue a statement definitely saying they will not pass a bill providing for a 25 per cent reduction in the state income tax.

"Not one of them has nerve enough to give out a statement saying they do not intend to pass an income tax reduction bill," the governor declared. "They could settle this thing, once and for all, so far as the present session of the Legislature is concerned, if they had the nerve."

The governor today was preparing to cut every appropriation bill "to the bone" in an effort to prove to the Republican leaders of the Legislature that a reduction of 25 per cent in the state income tax could have been made.

Friends of the executive said today he was convinced the Republicans had refused to cooperate with him because they were afraid he would "get the credit" for reducing taxes.

"The governor has said a whole lot about reducing the income tax but we think we will be lucky if we can keep the direct tax where it is," said Assemblyman Hutchinson, chairman of the ways and means committee of the lower house.

Republican leaders frankly declared they were more interested in preventing an increase in the direct tax than in bringing about a reduction in the income tax.

"I think everyone will agree that real estate today is more than bearing its burden of taxation," said Speaker McGinnies, G. O. P. leader of the Assembly. "We are doing our best to prevent an increase in the direct tax."

It will not be known until every appropriation bill has been acted upon whether there will be a change in the direct tax.

Senators Attempt To Haze Dawes

One Reads Burlesque Poem and Another Invokes Sarcasm in Criticism of Vice-President's Absence When Vote Was Taken on Warren Nomination.

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Washington, March 12.—Vice-President Charles G. Dawes was subjected to a "hazing" today from both sides of the senate chamber for his absence on Tuesday, when his vote would have prevented the rejection of Charles B. Warren's appointment, and his subsequent futile dash from the hotel to the chamber to try to save the day.

Senator Norris, Republican of Nebraska, read a poem which burlesqued the vice-president's hurried taxi-cab ride. It described the ride as being like the "cackling flight" and the "trail of a comet."

In conclusion, the poem placed Dawes in the congressional Hall of Fame with his inscription on his memorial statue: "Oh, Hell and Maria, he has lost us the day."

Dawes, who smiled good naturedly, then arose and said: "I cannot refrain from expressing appreciation of the delicate tribute, submitted by the senator from Nebraska."

This provoked further "hazing" at the hands of Senator Copeland, Democrat of New York, who also referred to Dawes' speech on March 4. "One of the unwritten rules of the senate is that the vice-president should be in the chair," said Copeland. "It seems that senators are not the only ones to forget the rules."

The governor said he was surprised because of the way the vice-president had been treated when he reached Washington this morning.

Shortly after Warren reached the Executive Mansion, Senator Butler was summoned, and with the president and Ambassador Almon B. Houchens present, there was a thorough canvass of the situation.

Senators Did Not Defend Him.

Warren is understood to have commented bitterly on the fact that administration senators did not come to his defense in Tuesday's debate. He was of the opinion that had the senate attacked by Democrats, particularly Warren, Montana, and Reed, Missouri, been adequately answered at the time, the result might have been different.

The vote by which Warren was rejected was 49 to 40. The absence of Vice-President Dawes presented a breakdown of the tie and his confirmation. This was a letter in the "confirmation" that Warren took as an insult in his defeat.

Entered Without Debate.

Warren's name was introduced without debate. The reference was made at the request of Senator Cushman, Republican of Iowa, who led the fight for Warren's confirmation.

Warren Keeps Own Counsel.

Warren arrived here today. He was met at the station by a White House limousine, and was driven immediately to the Executive Mansion, where he joined President Coolidge at breakfast.

"Nothing for publication," said Warren in response to questions. After breakfast was concluded, President Coolidge left Warren and Butler to discuss the situation between themselves and went to his desk.

Butler went to the Capitol at 10 o'clock without making known any decision.

Guided by Warren's Wishes.

In arriving at his decision, President Coolidge disregarded the advice of most of the influential Republican members of the Senate, who went to the White House in a steady stream yesterday to advise him that there was no chance of confirming Warren.

While no formal statement of the president's attitude was forthcoming, it is understood that Mr. Coolidge was guided largely by the wishes of Warren himself in the matter.

Coolidge Again Sends Warren's Name to Senate

Refuses to Accept Senate's Rejection of His Nominee for Attorney General—First In Over Half Century That President Has Been Compelled to Ask Second Time Approval of Official Family.

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Washington, March 12.—Refusing to accept the senate's rejection of Charles Beecher Warren of Michigan as attorney general, President Coolidge this afternoon again submitted Warren's name for the cabinet post. It was the first time in more than half a century that it was necessary for a president to ask the senate more than once to approve his selections for his official family.

No Unusual Formality.

The second Warren nomination went forward from the White House and was received at the senate at noon with no more formality than accompanies the submission of other presidential appointments.

The president made no explanation of his action, permitting the sending of the nomination to the senate for the second time to show that he did not regard the adverse vote on Warren as final and wanted to start the fight all over again.

Followed Breakfast Conference.

The re-submitting of Warren's name followed a White House breakfast conference in which the president went over the situation with Warren himself and Senator William M. Butler of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican national committee.

Leaders Confer.

A conference of Republican leaders were held at the Capitol as soon as the second Warren nomination was received. At the conclusion of this conference, Senator Butler rushed to a telephone and talked with the president at the White House. He is understood to have assured the president that there would be sufficient votes on the next test to confirm the nomination.

Plans of Opposition.

It developed that the first move of the opposition to Warren will be the raising of a point of order against the reconsideration of the nomination. Democrats contended that another vote on Warren would not be possible at this session under the rules.

Anticipating that such a point of order would be overruled by Vice-President Dawes, the opposition plans to appeal from the decision of the chair and by this procedure get another test vote without delay.

Thought President Was Beaten.

News of the president's decision created amazement in both Democratic and Republican quarters. On all sides it has been confidently expected that the summary defeat of Warren's appointment in the Senate would lead the president to look around for a new attorney general.

Leaders Still Feel Sure.

Senate Democrats declared Democrats to a man would oppose Warren's confirmation. Republican leaders merely shook their heads and said nothing for publication.

Republican and Democratic leaders declared Warren could not be confirmed unless there were a number of surprising defections on the part of those Democrats and independent Republicans who joined in defeating him. The Democrats were surprised and interested at the announcement, but Republican senators were obviously dismayed.

Warren Wants Fighting Chance.

At the conference this morning, Warren is understood to have demanded that he be given a chance to defend himself and to explain his connection with the so-called "sugar trust" which his opponents capitalized in the fight against him.

By sending the nomination back to the senate, he will be given that opportunity, for he can appear as a witness before a senate committee. Warren was in a fighting mood when he reached Washington this morning.

Shortly after Warren reached the Executive Mansion, Senator Butler was summoned, and with the president and Ambassador Almon B. Houchens present, there was a thorough canvass of the situation.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

A. MARY GRAM-BONNER

A BROTHER'S SISTER

Mimmie's brother was devoted to her even though he was eight years older than she was.

He used to let her play with him and with his friends a great deal. It had snowed the night before Mimmie had gone to sleep while the snow storm had kept up steadily. It was wonderful the way it had kept on while the whole world, almost, had gone to sleep.

The last thing Mimmie had heard was the great fog horn which was just outside the harbor. The bell on the buoy which told ships where the bad rocks were had clanged steadily. For as the buoy tossed about on the waves the bell at the top of the buoy rang.

It had been a "blinding" snowstorm they had said the next day and the ships along the coast had had a hard time of it. But with the day came sunshine, and when Mimmie awoke she thought for a moment why she was so very happy.

It was really annoying to feel so happy and not to know just why. But in a few moments she remembered. It was a Saturday and they had planned the night before to build a snow fort if the snow didn't turn into rain during the night.

Mimmie got up and shook off some of the snow which had fallen on the big eiderdown quilt.

Her sleeping room was at the top of the house and it was very cold. Its windows looked out over the harbor and her bed was near the windows so that often patches of snow were on the quilt. But she loved it. She loved moving the hot-water bottle about so that it warmed the sheets, and sometimes when the water in the bottle had frozen down at the end of the bed she had had to leave it until she was dressed and it was melted so she could pour it out.

She went downstairs to her playroom to dress, for she only used this room for sleeping. Sometimes people didn't believe the water in a water bottle could freeze in one corner of the bed while Mimmie was quite warm in another part of it. But she had shown it to her family and they had told people it was so.

"Hurry up, Mim, we want to get started soon."

The boys—eight of them—arrived a little later, and at each end of the yard a splendid snow fort was built. In one was a little special, protected room, where Mimmie was to sit when the snow battle got too fast for her.

In this way they were not worried for fear she would be hurt, and she did not spoil their fun.

The battle was a furious one. The snowballs were large ones.

But after a time they became smaller, as they had to be made and remade after throwing, and now there was no time allowed for snowball-making.

The boys had been invited to stay for lunch, and after lunch they played for awhile with trains in the house. The rain had come and spoiled the snow. Mimmie played with the Uncle Tom's Cabin and Noah's ark which had belonged to her brother when he was young and which now they owned together.

He was too old to play with them, but they still stayed in his room, so they owned them together.

Mimmie liked big boys better than she did big girls. Big girls told her she was young for her age, which was not true. She knew that.

Big boys called her a tomboy, and that was a great compliment, she thought.

She knew that was true. Her brother had taught her to ride in the express cart so she could be dashed around corners and she could balance without letting the cart upset. All the boys thought it was the way she could do this. And she could climb up and stand on her brother's shoulders, and when he got down on the floor she knew how to stand on his chest so as not to hurt him.

Very few, except those whose business it was to do this, knew how. She could steer a sled and turn corners on the sled. Her brother had taught her to do all these great things. She could swim a fence, too, and in an old time she used to climb the bad made way for her where she sat—high above the earth.

There were the things her brother and his friends had taught her to do. Big boys could really be so nice. Big girls were children, that's what they were. Because they were cry-babies, Mimmie's brother said, but Mimmie knew it was because these big boys said she was a tomboy.

EGG DISHES

Eggs when plentiful and at a reasonable price—should be served in various dishes for luncheon and supper, taking the place of meat.

Beat two eggs and add one-fourth cupful of milk, three-fourths cupful of grated cheese, salt one-half teaspoonful, and one-eighth teaspoonful of paprika. Cook over a slow fire until the omelet is a golden brown on the bottom. Run a spatula around under the omelet, make a slight incision on opposite sides and fold over. Turn on a hot platter and serve at once. It is a good plan to set the omelet into a hot oven for a minute to insure a good cooking on top, before folding.

Peasants' Omelet.—Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter in a double boiler, add one tablespoonful of flour, and when well blended and smooth add one teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper. Add one cupful of cold diced potatoes. Beat six eggs until light and pour into a well-buttered omelet pan. Cook slowly, lifting the mixture often at the sides. When the mixture begins to thicken spread over it the hot potatoes. Fold and serve. The potatoes may be moistened very slightly with a cream sauce. String beans, peas or other vegetables may be used, but should be hot when spread over the omelet.

Shirred Eggs.—Blend together one cupful of mashed potatoes, one-half cupful of cooked minced ham, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper, and one beaten egg, mix well and cover the bottom of a buttered baking dish. Break five eggs over the potato mixture, making a depression to hold each. Dot with bits of butter, dust with salt and pepper and bake until the eggs are firm.

ADOLPH OCHS.

The greatest success in the journalistic field in Gotham since Joseph Pulitzer took hold of The World and made it a paper of national influence has been scored by Adolph S. Ochs with the New York Times. The president and publisher of the great journal which now ranks with the great newspapers of the world, was born in Cincinnati sixty-seven years ago today.

He began his career as a "newsy" in Knoxville, Tenn., at the age of nine. At fifteen he was a printer's "devil" and at seventeen a journeyman printer. While working in the composing room of the Knoxville Tribune, he doubled as a reporter, and at nineteen he was a business solicitor for the Dispatch, a Chattanooga paper.

At twenty he bought the Chattanooga Times, which had failed, getting the property for a song. His capital was energy and ability, and with these two he soon paid off his debts and made the Times a prosperous paper.

In 1886 Mr. Ochs invaded New York and obtained control of The Times. In the days of Henry R. Raymond, The Times had been numbered among the great newspapers of New York, but when Mr. Ochs took hold of it the property had long been languishing on the brink of failure.

Like The World—then Joseph Pulitzer owned it—Mr. Ochs had a long and hard battle but as can be seen from the above resume of his earlier experiences, he knew every angle of the newspaper field from actual experience and has in the Times today one of the most valuable newspaper properties in the world.

ANNE DE ROHAN.

Anne de Rohan was the daughter of Catherine de Parthenay, heiress of the house of Soissons, was born in 1522, and acquired, like her mother, high reputation as the literary world. She would have been one of the greatest protectors of her age.

Two Types of Artists

The great artist is forever enlarging a scope of human art and embracing it with love that has never known art before. He can only do that by making them beautiful, and the would-be artist who brings into the world just as ugly after he has touched them is nothing in the world—Harlock Ellis.

Glycerin on Glass

To prevent raindrops of water from beading on glass, wipe off the glass with a piece of cloth wet with glycerin. The first few drops remain as drops spreading and showing a tendency to rub, but as the drops increase in number they come into contact with each other and coalesce, forming a smooth transparent film of water over the entire surface, which is no obstruction to vision.

Do You Buy Tons or Plant Food?

Isn't a question of how many pounds of fertilizer you are using to the acre, but how much plant food.

If you have been a user of high analysis goods in the past, then you know what it means to your crop and your pocketbook.

If you have not used high analysis fertilizers heretofore, then fall in line and make your general farm crops show a bigger profit.

For 1925, buy units of plant food instead of tons of fertilizer.

Advertising Waste

Secretary of Commerce Hoover, speaking to the recent Distribution Conference at Washington, referred to money wasted in advertising and sales promotion by national advertisers who are not properly informed on market conditions.

Secretary Hoover put his finger on one of the real causes of high sales costs.

This great country is a collection of markets.

Few manufacturers can profitably enter all markets. Market selection is the national advertisers' sure road to good business.

Newspaper advertising gives the national advertiser one great advantage—he can use it where he needs it. And he needs it wherever market conditions favor the sale of his product.

"The Right Way to Use Newspaper Space" and "The Newspaper Route to All Good Markets" are two valuable books that deal with this big subject. They will be sent, without cost or obligation, to manufacturers and distributors who will address THE BUREAU OF ADVERTISING, American Newspaper Publishers Association, 270 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Ancient Fashions Revived by Paris

Designers Present Bustle and Fitted Silhouette—New Short Frocks.

It is considered an fait in these days to speak of the "Psychology of Dress," and so one frequently hears the subject discussed at intimate gatherings. The subject, says a fashion writer in the New York Times, involves more than merely the tendency of fashion, what is likely to come next, but what ingenuity the modiste will employ or what is most becoming to be worn. Women really get down to fundamentals and influences, morale, history, periods, with as much thought and analysis as if they were regarding any of the fine arts.

Briefly and with much sophistication the ultra-smart may chat of the most recently acquired Reynolds and Remner, of Italian primitives and old Flemish art just brought to light, of Aubusson and Gothic tapestries, of the Spanish paintings, and almost in the same breath of the latest ideas from this or that notable designer in Paris. The trend of fashion is considered seriously, and the creators of styles are ranked with the authors of important works of art—which may be one reason why artists of a high order are more and more devoting their talents to developing and perfecting women's dress.

It is like a leisurely swing back to the Old-World days, when dress was the most absorbing interest in the life of a frivolous and overgrown and wholly artificial society. Although it is a long sweep from the extreme severity of Colonial times to anything like the extravagances of the Continental-belle monde, the present generation is arriving fast. If a certain desirable sense of proportion is maintained and the law of order and fitness obeyed the results will be most happy.

Return of Old Modes.

Some of the styles of early periods have great fascination for the modern woman of fashion. Curiously, those that have the greatest vogue are the extreme opposite of the modes that have startled the polite world for the last several years. The eccentricities of the Victorian age had little appeal to the woman who cares for grace and beauty. Any detail of the styles of that period makes its reappearance only as a clever couturier introduces it in his general scheme.

The bustle of 1880 was quite a different affair from the same motif shown in a 1925 model from one of the most illustrious houses at Paris. The crinolines of 1840 were impossible creations that made more distressing the distorted waistline of a painfully pinched-in bodice. But nothing in these, in the stiff panniers or the heavy trains, had any possibility of artistic adaptation. Each has been molded and reshaped over and over again in the endless search for novelty until it contains no further possibilities.

It is only in the tout ensemble that one catches a glimpse of reminiscent fashions, harmonized and modified often with the most delightful results.

Delightfully Youthful Version of One-Neck Paris Spring Frocks.

Brutic genius may flash a new conception, lacking the essentials of style and taste. It requires the power of an artist to keep a fine balance of values in line and color, and the fashion designer is one of those that present creations marvellous and nevertheless true.

An exceptionally chic woman who is a conspicuous example of the best form is shown stopped for a little on her way to dinner to answer a compliment paid to the frock she was wearing. She is tall, slim and patrician in bearing, and wears her clothes well. The gown she had on at this time was a Lanvin in shades of rose—soft and delicate with ruffles, or the La France rose, but the American Beauty shade. The foundation was made of stiff tulle. The bodice was plain. The neck a modest décolleté. Sleeves short, and the waistline marked at an almost normal point.

The skirt was the full gathered early Victorian, but without the crinoline or hoops. Over this was a top skirt of tulle, gathered full and crisp, the color a shade deeper than the tulle foundation. The trimming scheme was interesting. A line of gilt paillettes flanked the neck and the deep armholes. The skirt, veiled with the claret-colored illusion petticoat, was elaborated in the front with a large motif done in the paillettes, in crystal and pearl beads. A lavallière of diamonds, sapphires and rubies hung from a fine gold chain over the bodice, and the silk chestnut hair was brushed in wavy lines quite fearlessly back from a high, broad brow.

This vision referred to her dress as her favorite type, and said some engaging things about styles at the moment.

Predicts Great Changes.

"Great changes are near," she said, "and all in the direction of better things. This is a day of abbreviation in manner, speech and dress. There is no time for courtesy, for proper consideration of anybody or anything, and this idea dominates a woman's mood."

Coat of Rose Kaisha Cloth; Dress of Sand Crepe de Chine.

and taste in the selection of her clothes. It is a day of elimination of unnecessary detail, of artificialities.

"For several seasons we have been content with a swathing length of crepe or silk, abbreviated at the top, also at the bottom, and draped to show the figure according to the non-Occidental ideas. We have gone the limit, and with the question of morale not considered. A fickle and more or less moral audience desires the opposite, meaning modest, picturesque clothes. One reason that the 'period' gown appeals to me is that it makes for modesty. It is decorative, quaint, dignified and dashing as a frock can be, all at once. Still it is demure in a way. Credit is due to the designer having put this type of frock forward, season after season, until now it has a recognized vogue and is a regular mode."

In its latest adaptations the period gown is presented by both French and American designers with striking arrangement of lines and in some enchanting colors. Yellow is the latest phase in color and is shown in countless lovely variants. A clear bright amber tulle, the usual-bouffant skirt and plain basque, has motifs of gilt embroidery set at intervals on the skirt, which is veiled with an over-skirt of plain tulle in a deeper shade of yellow, almost bronze.

New and Winsome Shades. One model in corn-yellow silk divides the length of the skirt with a diagonal piece of orange tulle, carrying the line across the bodice and over one shoulder. A piping of the deeper shade finishes skirt, neck and armholes, and a cluster of marigolds in the two yellows, with gilt-tipped petals, is fashioned at one side of the waist.

New and lovely shades of blue are shown in the gowns of this type—lapis periwinkle, hydrangea, hydrangea, delphinium, and more than there are names to it. And some adorable things are done in all white. In frothy tulle with clouds of tulle. One from the atelier of Madeleine Vionnet is caught at regular spaces with clusters of snowdrops, and another, designed by an American artist, is fringed with soft-steamed white violets. These white-skirted, quaint-dressed costumes invite countless fancies in embellishment, all of them intriguing. Such garments are not in any sense monotonous, but they are exceedingly popular at the moment and represent a distinguished reproduction.

Another new-old style that is increasing in popularity is the dirndl. Its lines of generous diversity suggest more suitable gowns and wraps for afternoon and somewhat "drowsy" street wear. But the narrow petticoat and the redingote of brocade or trimmed silk, always with rich detail, go into the making of some striking costumes for dinner, supper-dance and the after-the-party parties at the smart dance clubs.

The reverse of one fashion tendency is reflected in the comments of the up-to-date Parisian modistes who are making their evening dresses, especially the dance frocks, extremely short.

KINGSTON, N. Y., MARCH 12, 1925.

THE WAR ON INSECTS

The greatest or most serious of all wars is that which the human race is waging against the growing army of destructive insects, according to W. A. Du Puy in an article in the March Harper's Magazine. This may seem a less extravagant assertion than it sounds when we recall the devastations of the tent caterpillar last summer and the ravages of the San Jose scale, the boll weevil and other deadly insect-plagues. Though we need not accept Mr. Du Puy's doleful prediction that ultimately man will lose in this war, it must be admitted that the boll weevil is so largely a victor that cotton planting conditions have been practically revolutionized in consequence, and that the San Jose scale has almost put an end to fruit growing in a small way in back yards or back lots, only the large fruit growers being able to afford the time and expense involved in the regular and systematic spraying with poison that keeps the pest in check and the trees alive.

The war with the insects might have been less serious than it now is if man had not disturbed nature's "balances" whereby destructive insects were formerly kept in check as the meat of their age-long foes. Unexpected trouble has been caused by the transportation of both plants and animals from one country to another. Parasitic insects which at home were kept down by the enemies preying upon them, carried with the exotics to new countries where the same enemies were not provided, have multiplied enormously and caused vast damage. For example, the gypsy moth was harmless in Germany as was a certain beetle in Japan, but, brought to this country, their destruction of leaves and grass have caused great damage and concern for the future. It would appear that the allotments of insects to climes and countries ordained by nature can not be disturbed without disaster of some sort, man's experimental changes bringing improvement in one form and calamity in another.

In the war on harmful insects man usually receives his chief aid from the birds, and the protection of these latter is of course imperative. Yet such protection can be carried far enough to upset another "balance" and cause vast increase of another pest. The friends of the bird would make war on one of its greatest enemies, the cat, yet the cat, in turn, is highly useful as the enemy of the rat—a creature which not only destroys food but is believed to originate some of the most terrible diseases. It is for this reason that the Connecticut legislature has just turned a deaf ear to the argument of the bird protectors that a tax should be placed on cats in order to reduce their numbers. It is obvious that in our war on insects we need to study not to employ means likely to disturb nature's equilibrium and thus bring upon us affliction in some other form.

It is related that once when a lady told Marcel she thought wireless telegraphy very wonderful he replied: "It is not half so wonderful as our conversing together now." The lady took this as a personal compliment but what the great inventor had in mind was the fact that the complicated machinery of the organs of speech and the delicacy of the organs of hearing are far more marvelous than anything man himself has devised. Even more marvelous are the workings of the organs of sight. We are born to the greatest of wonders—they are about us on every hand, but we rarely reflect upon them taking them for granted. Like the air we breathe and the earth we tread on.

The oldest human fossils were invariably found in Asia until one was discovered in California that for a time seemed to place man's most ancient habitat there. Now Africa has produced a fossil of a "man" said to be older than any previous discovery, but, as in the California case, some of the anthropologists are pretty holding out for Central Asia as the cradle of the human race.

Apparently Representative Sanders of Indiana, the president's new private secretary, has cherished the ambition to be in a class by himself, for we read that he "lobbied vigorously against himself" and finally succeeded in preventing the House from raising his salary from $7,500 to $10,000 a year. Thacker's Becky Sharp said it was easy to be good on ten thousand pounds a year. Mr. Sanders appears to be convinced that a president's secretary can really do his duty on very much less.

FOOD POISONING.

You have eaten some meat or fish and begin to suspect that all was not right with it.

You may have nausea, vomiting and an intense "colicky" pain and diarrhoea, followed by great weakness. Or this may be complicated by nervous symptoms, loss of vision, or even double vision, and dizziness. Sometimes there is a dryness of the throat and mouth.

Some forms of fish poisoning cause the surface of the skin to become intensely itchy, and then an eruption like hives follows.

Now although the stomach should be emptied as soon as possible, the strength of the heart must be maintained at all costs.

The washing out of the stomach, by giving a teaspoonful of mustard in warm water is the first thought. This should be done three or four times.

Tickling the throat with a feather, or putting the finger down the throat are likewise effective, as a rule.

The simple drinking of warm water and then inducing the vomiting cleanses the stomach of the poison.

If the poisonous food has been in the body for some time then the old-fashioned injection or enema of warm water with some soapuds in it, should be used.

With the intestine cleared you have gone a long way in your treatment. Meanwhile the heart may need stimulation and the usual dosage of digitalis or strychnine should be given, but only by a physician. If no physician is at hand hot coffee is an effective stimulant. The poison attacks the system, reaches its maximum of power and then gradually subsides.

If you can conserve the patient's strength by having him lie down and thus make less work for the heart, the vital thing, maintaining the strength of the heart, is being done.

The stimulants should be used if there be signs of weakness. The full effect of food poisoning may take weeks to wear away.

Ragson Tatters and his wife had missed the train to the city.

Indignant Comedian: "Look 'ere,

Increase in Pork Price Explained

According to Calvin Forst, manager of Armour & Company's plant on Dederick street, materially reduced receipts of cattle and hogs—particularly hogs—at the principal western markets have caused demand to greatly exceed supply, and as a result there have been sharp advances in the price both of live animals and meat. The average marketing of hogs for the week ending March 7th at 11 principal markets was 30,000 a day less than a year ago and in consequence, hogs are seven cents a pound higher than they were then. On current corn prices hogs are showing a profit to the farmer. Live cattle have advanced about two cents a pound since the first of the year.

Due to the consumer's preference and demand for certain choice cuts, these choice cuts have to carry the major proportion of price increases. Pork chops, steaks and loin roasts, and other fancy cuts are costing from five to fifteen cents a pound more than was the case several weeks ago, while pork shoulders, pot roasts, round steaks, boiling beef and various other parts and portions that are not in great demand have not shared in the upward movement to any considerable extent.

Deputy Sheriffs Anderson, Ellsworth and Gaynor made the arrest. When arraigned Wednesday afternoon he entered a plea of not guilty and an adjournment was taken. He was released on bail by Justice Jesse Davis of the town of Rosendale. J. C. Merritt appeared for The People and William D. Brinnier, Jr., for defendant.

The photoplay is Edmund Lowe in "Champion of Lost Causes," a mystery melodrama of snails and chills.

Showing at Keene's tonight, Friday and Saturday is "The Eternal City," a First National picture produced by George Fitzmaurice and presented by Samuel Goldwyn, with Barbara La Marr, Lionel Barrymore, Bert Lytell, Richard Bennett and Montagu Love in the leading roles. While the production is noted chiefly for its thrilling story, which was written by Sir Hall Caine, the acting of its brilliant cast and its perfect direction, it is particularly colorful in its settings and contrasts.

At the Auditorium tonight "Dante's Inferno." An astounding pictorialization of life's greatest riddle—What of the Hereafter?

Five New vaudeville acts are on the program at the Orpheum for today, tomorrow and Saturday. The feature, direct from The Strand, is "Single Wives" with Corinne Griffith and Milton Sills. WHICH IS THE SAFER SIDE OF THE STREET FOR THE PEDESTRIAN?

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, D. C., March 12.—A series of studies conducted by the American Automobile Association as a part of its national safety program shows that the average pedestrian too often follows the dangerous line of least resistance, whether he is walking on crowded city streets or on the rural highway.

The pedestrian seldom takes time to avoid the "danger point" or to consider which is the safer side of the street to walk on. There is a safer side and one way to minimize the personal accident hazard is to keep this in mind.

The accompanying diagram prepared by the A. A. A. shows that the all important precaution is to keep the line of vision clear. The majority of street accidents occur at the danger point where motor vehicles make the right hand turn and come from behind the pedestrian.

To avoid this point it is safer to walk on the side of the street where one faces the approaching traffic and has a clear view of vehicles, particularly those negotiating the right hand turn.

There is also a safer way of crossing to the diagonal corner and a number of ways that are not so safe. Here again the important question is to follow the line that will give the highest range of vision in regard to traffic.

It is equally important to walk on the safe side of the approaching traffic on rural highways where many unnecessary accidents occur.

A large number of fatalities on highways are caused by motor vehicles faring in the same direction as the pedestrian and if the latter prefers this side of the road he is heedlessly overlooking a very vital safety precaution. His doing this often compels the driver of a car to swerve sharply into the middle of the road, thus increasing the risk of collision with vehicles coming from the opposite direction.

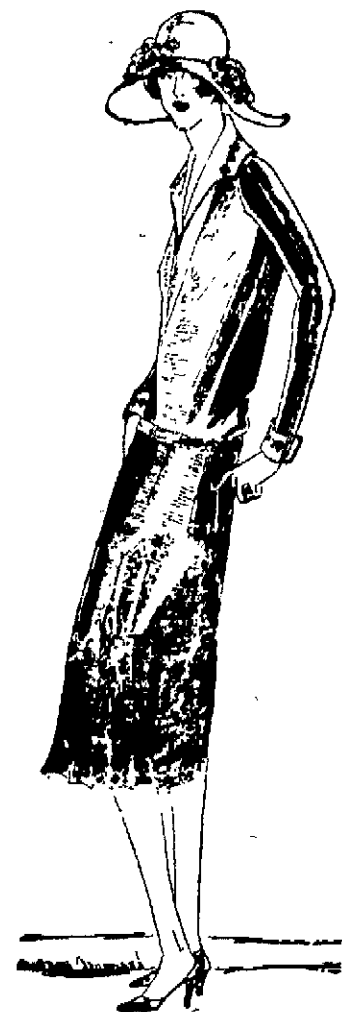

In its safety campaign, in which it is cooperating with the Hoover conference on street and highway safety, the A. A. A. is stressing education for the motorist and the pedestrian alike as one of the most important factors in bringing about adjustment of the people at large to the new conditions resulting from the tremendous increase in motor vehicles on the streets and highways of the country.

NAVY AND RED HEAD SPRING COLOR LIST

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

One feels that spring fashions have really gotten under way when reports of the French collections begin to come through by wireless and mail. There is always a bit of excitement, and much curiosity at this season concerning the vagaries in the mode.

The tendency, which is not surprising to many, seems to be toward a more molded line, and rather away from skirts which are uncompromisingly straight.

In discussing town clothes with one of the greatest fabric makers of the world who came to Palm Beach on a tour of America, he expressed the opinion that navy blue would substitute for black this spring, and that red would dominate the color situation, combinations of navy and red, and red, black, and white being particularly happy. It is more or less an innovation of the past few seasons, this acceptance of red, which has gone to the extent of having women wear red coats as well as dresses, and red accessories galore. The red hat registered as a prime favorite at Palm Beach, and red scarves were most popular—all of which the visiting Parisian saw as the handwriting on the wall.

Navy has been heralded now for two years. Last year it failed to live up to what was expected of it, but this year it gives promise that the prophecies were justified.

It appears to be fabrics of the family of kasha which are engaging everyone's attention, largely because women of today are such enthusiasts on the subject of sports, or, at least, simple clothes. That pastel shades are the newest thought for clothes worn for sports, the southern resorts have proved. It begins to look as though brighter tones would be liked for town wear, with red and navy much the favorites, and purple crowding into position to come out the winner.

"INDIVIDUALITY OF DRESS"

Draping Severely Plain Turban Fits It For the Slender Face

The girl with the slender face, on the left in the illustration, had declared that she was too thin to wear a turban. Then once she tried on the hat of her friend on the right and found it becoming, whereas it never quite seemed to suit its owner. The reason is that a draped turban gives breadth to the face. A scarf or veil wound around and knotted at the side softens the severe lines of the very plain turban and makes it wearable for the girl with features that are inclined to be angular.

Gas Tank Leak Causes Fear

A leak in one of the large gasoline tanks of the Standard Oil Company, which allowed the contents to fill the gutters and the sewers of Highland on Sunday, caused a near panic, as it was feared if anybody should accidentally drop a lighted match it might blow up and cause considerable damage in the village. The tank is located on the company's property near the outskirts of the town and the leak was not noticed until the ground was saturated with the volatile liquid. An attempt to repair the leak caused it to spread and the greater part of the contents was on the outside before it was finally plugged. The main office of the company in Kingston was notified and sent workmen at once to make the repairs. It is not known what caused the break in the tank.

FAMOUS FORTS IN U. S. HISTORY

Outposts of the Old S. W. Frontier

When white "squatters" began trespassing upon the lands set aside for the Choctaw Indians in the present state of Oklahoma a hundred years ago, the government determined to establish military posts in that region to protect its red wards. Accordingly Col. Matthew Arbuckle, commandant at Fort Smith, Ark., was ordered to select sites for two new forts, one near the mouth of the Verdigris river in the valley of the Arkansas and the other near the mouth of the Kiamitia in the Red river country.

Arbuckle asked Col. Auguste P. Chouteau, a Creole French trader who was familiar with the region, to select the site for the post on the Verdigris and by the middle of April, 1824, Chouteau and Capt. Nathaniel Pryor, another well-known frontiersman of that day, had chosen the place. Within a few weeks Arbuckle had established there a stockaded fort and it was occupied by a force of 300 men. This was the beginning of Fort Gibson, named in honor of Col. George Gibson, then commissary general.

The first few years of Fort Gibson's existence were uneventful. It was a lonely outpost with canoe travel on the Grand river as the only means of communication with the outside world until 1828, when the first steamboat arrived. In 1832 Washington Irving visited the post, and in his book "A Tour of the Prairies" we are given some interesting glimpses of life at this far western military post.

In 1844 there was organized at Fort Gibson an expedition to return to their people some captive Kiowa and Wichita Indian children, who had been ransomed from the Osages, and Gen. Henry Leavenworth came to the fort to take command. This was the first appearance of the newly organized First dragoons which numbered among its officers such celebrities as Henry Dodge, Stephen W. Kearney, Edwin V. Sumner, Philip St. George Cooke and Jefferson Davis. George Catlin, the famous Indian painter, also accompanied the expedition.

From that time on Fort Gibson was an important post in the southwest and with the exception of three or four years just before the Civil war it was continuously garrisoned by regulars until 1890. During the Civil war it was the center of operations for the armies which were contesting for control of Indian Territory but after the war the frontier had been pushed so far beyond it that it gave place in importance to several other Oklahoma forts, notably Fort Sycamore. "SOME GIRL" AT THE KINGSTON OPERA HOUSE

The three act farce "Some Girl" will open Monday evening at the Kingston Opera House for a two days run. Tuesday there will be a matinee as well as the usual night performance. This musical comedy features four Martelle in a female impersonation capacity and is said to be one of the best opportunities for this artist to exhibit his talents. Martelle is surrounded by a capable cast which can sing and dance as well.

There is a real plot to "Some Girl" and the musical numbers are said to be tuneful and catchy. The stage settings and costumes are elaborate, and the set in the second act, showing a spot in the Catskill mountains, is beautiful. Tommy appears as the princess and wears a number of elaborate costumes. Several other comedians appear in the cast including Homer Barton, who as Wally, a fat and blundering college youth injects a spirit of mirth.

The story deals with a social climber who aims to marry his daughter off to a prince, despite the fact that his daughter is in love with a college boy. Clever work on the part of the college female impersonator in the role of a princess changes things and several interesting characters are woven in the scenes.

There will be no matinee on Monday afternoon. Tuesday afternoon there will be the usual matinee at the Opera House.

BILLIONS IN GOLD LOST FROM SIGHT

Treasure Hoarded in All Countries but India Has Immense Quantities.

Washington.—Who has all the gold? The United States has the great bulk of the gold that is in actual circulation, but this is only a small part of the gold that is known to be in existence.

Thus far the best answer to the question has been furnished by the experts of the United States mint, who assert that since Christopher Columbus discovered America in 1492 the world has dug up gold to the value of $3,965,000,000, or $20,000,000,000.

Now since gold does not decay or wear out appreciably it is argued that the vast bulk of this is still in actual existence. But the authorities of the United States mint say that they can trace in actual circulation in the various countries only $9,210,000,000. By the painful operation of subtraction we learn that some $10,615,000,000 in pure gold has disappeared from view.

Use in the Arts.
Perhaps $5,000,000,000 of it has been converted into gold ornaments of various sorts. Goldsmiths with a taste for antiquarian research regard five billion as the very outside figure as an estimate of the gold "consumed" in the arts. Granting that this estimate is sound, this leaves about $5,615,000,000 which has completely disappeared from view.

Joseph S. McCoy of the United States treasury says foreign-born citizens of the United States have sequestered at least $225,000,000 in gold, while farmers, suspicious of their local banking resources, have concealed another $125,000,000 and the "misers" of the towns and cities "who live in squalor and gloat over their hoards hidden in socks, coffee-pots or fruit-jars or buried at the foot of trees" have concealed another $14,000,000.

Hoarded in India.
But of course there is India—and when it comes to hoarding gold, the United States cannot hold a candle to India. India is where the gold is. From ryot to rajah the Indians know gold, like it, get it and keep it.

The women-folks of the most impoverished Indians have gold bangles, anklets, armlets or nose-rings. The marwarri, or local money-lender, turns his day's proceeds into gold and buries it. The native princes exhaust their rich Oriental imaginations in contriving new ways of "consuming" gold.

Scores of Indian temples are decorated with pure gold, offerings of the devout. Every few years the domes of these temples are regilded with the precious metal.

There is one rajah—not "Mr. A"—whose fancy it is to have his palace illuminated with multitudinous small panes of glass in the center of which is a gold sovereign worth at par, $4.86. Another Indian prince has had the hobby of collecting hundreds of thousands of gold mohurs and "great mohurs," which were the gold sovereigns and double-sovereigns in India of many years ago.

In Other Nations.
South Africa, too, is known to have a great hoard of gold. A South African bank recently estimated that the Kaffirs alone had concealed $80,000,000 worth of gold. As for China—she exports gold into India at the rate of $20,000,000 worth a month and her hoards show no signs of exhaustion.

But it is one thing to know where the gold is and quite another to know how to coax it back into the world of affairs.

French Village Rejoices in Change of Its Name

Erreux, France.—The 200 inhabitants of St. Pierre-des-Cerats have been filled with joy by the decision of the state council authorizing the name of their village to be changed to St. Pierre-des-Flours.

The literal translation of their original name is "Saint Peter of the Coffins," so that it is easy to understand their satisfaction at the change to "Saint Peter of the Flowers."

At the same time, there is a movement on foot to change the name of the department Charente-Inférieure to Charente-Maritime, because the department finds that its wives suffer in the esteem of foreigners by having the word "inférieure" on their labels, as the mistake is made that it refers to their quality and not to the position of the department on the "lower" part of the River Charente.

Co-eds Ban Smoking

Ann Arbor, Mich.—Co-eds at the University of Michigan have given up voluntarily their privileges of smoking. A self-inflicted ban has been placed on every organized university house on the campus. The girls decided that they would outlaw members of their own sex who refused to abide by the decision.

BEGGARS GAIN LARGE INCOMES IN LEIPZIG

Blind Woman Said to Gather in $200
a Week—$15 to $25 a Day
Is Common.

Leipzig.—It seemingly pays to beg in Leipzig. The municipal welfare office of this city has unearthed facts as to the profits of the begging profession that would seem fanciful were they not borne out by first-hand testimony.

One blind woman, for instance, manages to scrape together 1,000 marks, about $200 a week. Daily earnings of $15 or $25 a day are not at all unusual with man and woman beggars of experience.

Two brothers who were offered jobs declined them, saying they were making much more money with their "concerts." These "concerts" consisted in singing before the houses of the middle class and following the performance with a sad story ending in a plea for alms. One of the brothers, it developed, spent his Sundays driving a motorcycle with his fiancée.

In another instance a beggar offered the owner of a certain clever dog $100 for the loan of the animal during begging hours, because, he said, the animal would help his business. Another beggar engaged two cripples to beg for him. He paid them a regular salary, but claimed the entire earnings. In still another case a beggar who pretended he was a disabled war veteran paid two watchmen 25 cents an hour each to warn him whenever a policeman appeared.

Investigation further developed that one of the most lucrative forms of begging was that of exhibiting children by way of winning public sympathy. It was discovered that there exists a school in Leipzig at which children are taught by experienced beggars what to say and what sort of doleful face to put on. Children thus trained are then hired out to professional beggars, who in return hand over a share of the proceeds to the director of the school.

Zoologists Attracted to New Field Laboratory

Lexington, Ky.—Attracted by the unusual resources for study and scientific investigation, a number of scientists have indicated their intention of visiting this summer the new zoological field laboratory to be opened for the summer session of the University of Kentucky in a section of the eastern Kentucky mountains never before touched by naturalists, according to Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, head of the department of zoology at the university.

Among those expected are Prof. J. G. Needham, head of the department of biology, Cornell university; Prof. C. R. Crosby, spider expert of Cornell; S. C. Bishop, state zoologist of New York and an authority on salamanders; and G. P. Engelhardt, director of the Brooklyn museum.

The field laboratory consists of about 500 acres of the isolated portion of the E. O. Robinson tract. It is a typical mountain country, which shows primeval conditions in native fauna and flora. Doctor Funkhouser said. It is rugged, well timbered and watered, with attractive topographical features and unusual biological resources, being rich in the number of species of insects, snakes, birds and mammals represented. Located in the wildest part of Breathitt county, the new field is traversed by several mountain streams, offering opportunities for studying aquatic life.

Washington Plans Study of Sea-Water Phenomena

Washington.—Among the things the government intends to do during the coming year is to make an intensive study of sea water, its characteristics and phenomena.

The navy department is planning to furnish a boat, the bureau of standards will furnish a staff and instruments, and a number of other scientific branches of the government will be represented in the personnel of the expedition, if congress approves.

A surprising number of missing links in scientific knowledge of the sea remain to be found. As listed by Dr. G. K. Burgess, director of the bureau of standards, they include the salinity of the seas, which is in part an effect and in part a cause of ocean currents; the efficiency of depth-sounding mechanisms; the variation in the pull of gravity over water surfaces, and the variation in magnetic flux which occasions strange deflections of the compass needle.

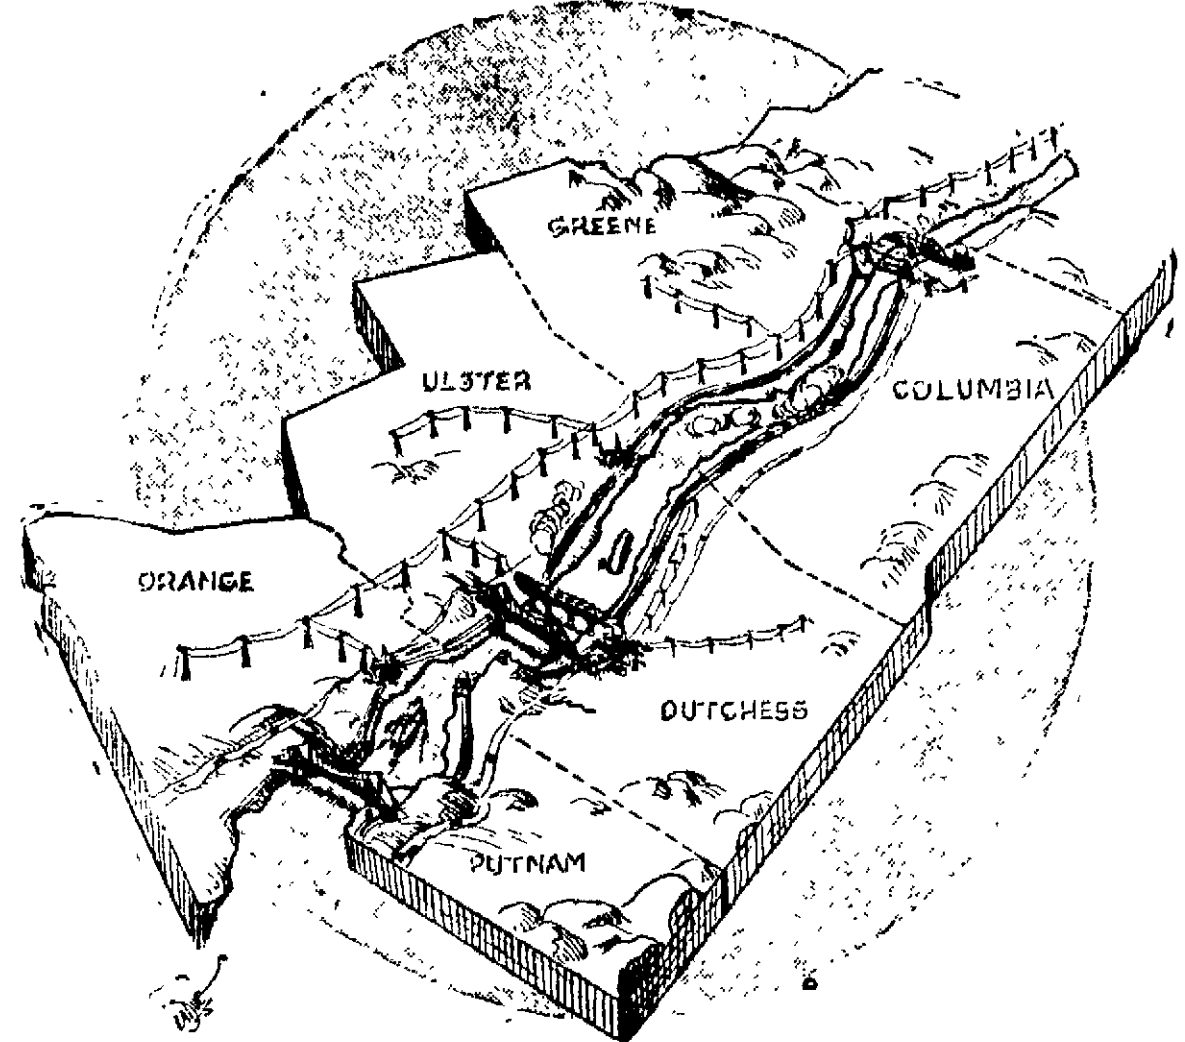

Build Sea Wall to Save Duck Hunters' Paradise

Richmond, Va.—A huge sea wall will be built to save far-famed Duck bay, Virginia's paradise for the duck hunters of many states, according to W. McDonald Lee, Virginia commissioner of game and fisheries, who recently inspected the district after receiving complaints from hunters that salty water from the Atlantic threatened to kill all food for wild fowl in the vast area.

The waters of Duck bay are salted, but not enough to prevent a wide variety of grasses and plants from growing on its shores and marshes. But, said the commissioner, the Atlantic ocean has broken through its natural barriers of sand dunes and is pouring in too much salt for the plant life to survive. A sea wall to withstand the nightlong storms will be thrown across the weakened breach.

Only Enduring Peace

No peace was ever won from force by subterfuge or agreement; no peace is ever in sure for any of us, but which we shall win by victory over shame or sin—victory over the sin that oppresses, as well as over that which corrupts.—Ruskin.

America's Greatest Highway and the Central Hudson Region

OF EQUAL importance with Production of goods is that of Transportation. The famous highways of history, the old world route called "Silk Street", the Appian Way, and the trade routes along which have been built the world's greatest seaports and trading centers, attest to the importance of Transportation and the effect that the movement of goods has upon the growth communities along the way.

The Hudson River is one of these great highways, famous for three centuries, in fact ever since Hendrick Hudson fired the imagination of the traders of the old world with his account of this majestic river.

Ships from far away ports, day boats, night boats, freighters, lighters and barges ply its waters. Along its shores one of the world's greatest railroads takes "the water route" to the west, while motor traffic pours over the paved roads just back from the river. All these together make this America's greatest highway.

This highway is the common possession of the communities of the area. It is a link, binding together the six counties comprising this economic unit called the Central Hudson Region.

But geographic boundaries, common advantages as to transportation, climate, scenery, history, tradition and legend, together with a people with similar ideals and aspirations, are not the only factors that make this a Regional Unit.

The Central Hudson System of Gas and Electric Companies, which serves the communities in the six counties of the Central Hudson Region, also exerts a unifying effect. It is the means of interconnecting the power sources of the region, supplying a uniform service to customers, some 15,000 of whom are the holders of the company's securities. Indeed more than 90 percent of the securities of the Central Hudson System are owned by people who live in the area.

Schools Teaching Labor Is Useful

Prof. B. C. van Ingen, principal of the Kingston High School, was the speaker at the Rotary luncheon on Wednesday and gave a most interesting talk on progress in government and in education, emphasizing the fact that changes in the education system had been the more radical and, in recent years, the more rapid. Contrasting the ungraded school, insufficient furniture and unsanitary condition of a generation ago with the schools of today, the speaker argued that not the least valuable thing done, especially in high schools, was the strengthening of the idea that all labor is useful and honorable, that education fits for other than "white collar jobs."

In Kingston High School students are prepared for college and are also prepared for business and mechanical trades while the girls are trained for home work. The school is adapted to the needs of 850 students and now has 1,100. It is lacking a proper field for outdoor relaxation and this might be supplied by grading a part of the lot in the rear of the building.

Other features of the luncheon were singing by John H. Gregory, the mellifluous warbler of the Kingston club, who has recently returned from Florida with voice greatly improved in tone, and felicitations by J. T. Johnson to the three club members whose birthdays were celebrated this week.

Is Candidate

Otto Braun, former Minister-President of Prussia, has been named as candidate on the Socialist Party for President of Germany. Braun's nomination is said to have split the ranks of the coalition element in the Reichstag, and his candidacy is regarded by some as the means of aiding the reactionaries' chances of election, for disension has broken out among the Socialist-Republican forces.

The Telephone

Elizabeth was three years old and, what is more, Elizabeth, like most small girls, was very fond of games of "make believe." Her latest delight in the realm of fancy was "playing telephones," a game of which she never grew tired.

Her grandmother was well aware of Elizabeth's fancy and one night, when the little girl was proving obstinate about going to have her bath, the old lady thought she would try a little strategy.

Grandmother (holding one end of the toy telephone)—Hello! Is that Elizabeth?

Elizabeth (very delighted)—Yes, grandma!

Grandmother—Well, come along, Elizabeth, it's time for your bath.

Elizabeth (dropping receiver)—Wrong number!

Made Lonely Journey

A woman farmer in a lonely part of South Africa, Mrs. Ida Francis, has just shown that in luck and endurance British women settlers are not behind the men.

About two months ago a cyclone devastated her farm, which lies beyond the western fringe of the desolate Kalahari desert; and then came floods which destroyed the food and shelter for her cattle. The only way to save her animals was to drive them 400 miles across the desert to her son's farm, and this she did, unaided.

She found that many of the water holes in the desert had dried up, and sometimes she had to ward off attacks by lions with her rifle; but she kept steadily on, and in the end brought nearly all her charges through safely. —Family Herald.

Australians Know Snow

Snow falls in southeastern Australia during the winter months, and occasionally lies on the ground as far north as Melbourne and Sydney. On the mountains and in southeastern Victoria and southern New South Wales, the snowfall is very heavy. Forests are periodically buried in snow and the plateaus of northeastern Victoria are sometimes covered to the depth of several feet from May to September. This also occurs on the highlands of Tasmania, although there are no mountains bearing perpetual snow-caps in either Australia or Tasmania.

By Telegram to The Freeman. Albany, N. Y., March 12.—Governor Smith's proposed $300,000,000 bond issue for the elimination of grade crossings was definitely rejected at a meeting today of the legislative committee created to investigate the grade crossing problem.

The governor's proposal was adopted last year and had been approved at the present session it could have been submitted to the voters this fall.

Senators Drop World Court

Issue Abandoned Until Regular Session of Congress in December—Will Decide Isle of Pines Treaty and Then Adjourn for Summer.

By Telegram to The Freeman. Washington, March 12.—All hope for action on American adherence to the world court at this session of the Senate was abandoned today when both Republican and Democratic conferences voted to drop the issue until next December.

The Democrats decided to combine in a drive to force the fixing of a date for consideration of the court question when Congress reconvenes next December. By this action they withdrew all support from the move launched by Senator Harris, Democrat, of Georgia, to bring the issue to a vote at the present session.

The Republicans also agreed to postpone action on the protocol and decided to remain constantly in session until the Isle of Pines treaty is ratified or rejected, and then adjourn for the summer. This would mean that action on the Lausanne treaty would be postponed until December.

The Democratic attitude was explained in a statement issued by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, minority leader. He said:

"The overwhelming sentiment of the conference was in favor of the world court. In event that the majority should take no action whatsoever on the world court at this session, the minority will insist upon making it a special order for some early date in the next regular session."

The Democrats also agreed to "take an early vote" on the pending Isle of Pines treaty.

St. Louis Browns Remain Intact

With The Exception of Urban Shocker's Departure and Joe Bush's Adventure—"Smoky Joe" Most Valuable Man in Camp—A Few Holdouts.
(By Davis J. Walsh.)

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Tarpon Springs, Fla., March 12.—Variety may be the salt and pepper of this squirrel cage called life, but apparently George Sisler plans to take his without seasoning.

He announced that the St. Louis Browns would remain as was, barring the departure of Urban Shocker and the coincidental advent of Joe Bush, the bullet. Not another major operation is to be performed upon the patient, it being reported that mother, father and child are doing well.

Sisler, himself will oblige at first base; Marty McManus at present estranged over a difference of opinion on sordid money matters, eventually will get around to play second base; Garber, perforce will continue at short stop and Gene Robertson again will appear at third base.

The first strong fly chasers, namely, Williams, Jacobson and Tobin, remain intact, with Doctor George Evans, the practicing outfielder, as leading substitute. Herschell Bennett, Western Association star, is making himself generally useful, but Herschell has picked a tough spot. The Brown outfield trio is among the best in baseball.

Tobin slipped a bit last year, so he hid himself to dentist and had him do his worst. Now they claim that Johnny, fortified by his store teeth, is ready for a big season. The first thing you know some ball player will have himself amputated from a pestiferous wind pipe and naturally will proceed to hit a million.

The inevitable Hank Severoid will do most or all of the catching, assisted, if at all, by Tony Rego and Leo Dixon, provided the latter decides to report. He was obtained from St. Paul for the reputed sum of $50,000 and wants his share of the loot.

Bush, who engaged Miller Huggins at the popular pastime of loggering throughout the 1924 season, appears to be the life of the party. Sisler has given him complete supervision of all the pitchers and they are to take their orders from Joseph. He has reached to this condition of affairs by working hard and more cheerfully than ever before.

"I don't know and don't care whether Bush will win more games than Shocker this season," Sisler said. "But I'll say this much: I wouldn't trade him back with $10,000 thrown in." Bush is the most valuable man in my camp.

Dave Davenport, leading pitcher of the club last year, is another holdout, but is expected to capitulate. Dixie Davis and Wingard are back for more, if any. They form the vulnerable section of the Browns' armor and something must be done about it rather hurriedly if the club is to be a contender. Perhaps Milton Gaston, obtained with Bush from the Yankees, will do it. He has developed a fork ball from working with Bush and no longer uses his knife except for peas. Sisler says he expects the young man to fill an aching void—that of relief pitchers, a specimen of which the Browns of recent years have seen little. Joe Glard, left hander, obtained from Toledo as part of the Shocker deal, also looks like something. He is alleged to be mastering control and has everything else, or so it is said. Chester Falk, brother of Bob, is around and about. So is Eddie Shauffer of Peoria. Likewise Brad Springer, Detroit semi-pro.

100 needed pitcher of pitchers may be concealed somewhere among these gentlemen.

Dr. Evans is available for extra infield duties and the same may be said of Bob Lamotte, former Senator, and Harry Rice, although it is possible the latter may soon go on a long journey.

Hoppe Still Leading.
By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Boston, March 12.—Jake Schaefer, of Chicago, world's champion billiardist, was within 193 points of Willie Hoppe, the challenger, with 1,500 more points to play today. The match stands: Hoppe, 2261; Schaefer, 2152. Schaefer won the sixth block 400 to 234, after Hoppe had prevailed 400 to 324 in the previous block. Neither player exhibited the control they had exercised in previous blocks.

Big Moments In Sports

In the spring of 1914 the first of a series of British college relay teams invaded the United States, endowed with one Olympic champion, one world's record holder, two men who had British titles in distance running and an abiding faith in its ability to spread-eagle the field in the four-mile championship relay at the University of Pennsylvania carnival. This view was shared by nearly everyone.

Didn't the Oxford team have A. N. S. Jackson, the scholarly looking gent, who beat Jones, Kiviat and Taber in the 1,500-meter race at the 1912 Olympics? Didn't it have Taber himself, an American Rhodes scholar who only a short time before had turned in a record mile of 4:12 3-5? Didn't it have Gausson and Sprout, two of the best distance runners in England? To make answer in blanket terms, it did.

No Spread-Eagling.
Didn't it spread-eagle its field, as advertised? It didn't. In some quarters Oxford's victory is questioned to this day, so close was the decision. Pennsylvania, a good average American college relay team, all but beat the overconfident invaders in one of the greatest finishes of all time. At the tape you couldn't have slipped a visiting card between the runners, yet the judges managed to see Oxford in front.

The first half of the race saw Bacon and Langner, of Pennsylvania, hold their own with Sprout and Gausson, the rest of the field being well up at this point. It became a two-team race, however, when Madiera of Penn. stepped out with a 4:21 mile and beat the great Taber by twenty yards. The transplanted American apparently had not taken the event as seriously as the outcome justified.

His nonchalant performance staked McCurdy, of Penn., to a long lead over Jackson, but the latter went out like a quarter-miler and ranged in behind McCurdy before the end of the first lap. They were a grotesque pair—Jackson lank and cadaverous, with the leg spread of an adult giraffe; McCurdy undersized, flat-footed, hairless as an infant and cursed with the arm motion of a candy puller.

He looked like a sap to Jackson who played his cards accordingly. Instead of stepping out at a clicking pace, the Englishman elected to range

Training With The Big Leaguers

Alongside of McCurdy with the evident intention of flashing past him at the finish. No greater mistake was made by mortal man. You had to beat McCurdy before the stretch or not at all, so powerful was his sprint. A slow pace was exactly what he wanted.

Not realizing this, Jackson ran wide of McCurdy for nearly three laps, thus going out of his way to run farther than the distance required.

McCurdy on Heels.
A furlong from home he decided that matters had gone far enough and essayed a spectacular sprint. McCurdy was right there with him and, striking twice to Jackson's once, carried the Briton into the stretch on even terms, with 30,000 spectators in a frenzy.

But McCurdy had held back a dying effort and 50 yards from home he gave it, pushing into the lead. They came down to the tape in this position and five yards away McCurdy still was a foot to the good. At this moment a wild-eyed spectator, fell upon the writer from above and neither of us witnessed the finish.

Stiff Games for Clinton Seniors

On Friday afternoon, the Clinton Avenue Seniors will travel to Poughkeepsie to meet the Poughkeepsie High School Seconds. This game will be staged immediately following the Poughkeepsie-Kingston game. The Clinton Avenue Seniors defeated the K. H. S. Seconds in the early part of the season by the score of 25-7 so they think they will give the P. H. S. Seconds a try on Friday afternoon. The game promises to be close because the Seniors have been playing good ball lately.

On Saturday night of this week they will again tackle the St. Joseph's quintet. The Saints now have the lead in the series over the "Boys in Green," two to one. The Seniors are very much determined to even up the series on Saturday night and the uptown aggregation is just as determined to wind up the series on Saturday night. The other three games drew very large crowds but a still larger crowd is expected to witness the fourth game.

A Card Party

The degree staff of Atharhacton Rebekah Lodge will hold a card party at their rooms this evening. A cordial invitation is extended to every one.

A Mexican Baseball League

Hal Chase Hopes to Put Baseball in Mexico on a Real Sporting Basis. Series of International Games to Determine Champions.
By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Bisbee, Ariz., March 12.—"Within a year or two any baseball team that wishes to annex the title of world's champions must first defeat our team in a series of international games."

This came today from Hal Chase, formerly White Sox first baseman, now operating a cafe at Agua Prieta, Sonora, Mexico, who said he had been approached by an official of the Mexican government with hopes of organizing a Mexican baseball league.

"I hope to put baseball in Mexico on a real sporting basis, free from commercialism, which is injuring the sport in America," Chase continued. "It was suggested to Chase that a somewhat awkward situation might arise should a Mexican champion team and the victors meet with him as the Mexican baseball 'czar' and Judge Landis as the American 'king.' Chase smiled and said: 'If I am successful in launching baseball to the satisfaction of the Mexican government it will come with all grace if Judge Landis raises any objections to me.'"

Chase is looking forward to sitting in at the council table with Landis on equal footing with baseball's high commissioner in arranging for the first international series.

Chase will soon leave for Mexico City, he has announced, to further plan for organizing baseball.
